public offering of Autodesk was made, and the company name changed to "AutoDesk, Inc." Autodesk distributed AutoCAD 1990 for free to their original customers, and the first public release was also the first time the version number was incremented. On September 17, 1991, Autodesk acquired a company that was known at the time as "Bill Roy" Software, a computer software consulting company founded in 1974 by Bill Roy. The company's name changed to "Roy Ingebritsen," and in July 1992, Autodesk moved into its new headquarters on the far east side of Austin, Texas, and officially changed its name to "AutoDesk, Inc." The first public release of AutoCAD 2000 was in December 1991. On January
